

James G. Huse, Jr. Inspector General

James G. Huse, Jr., currently serves as the Inspector General, Office of the Inspector General (OIG), Social Security Administration (SSA). Mr. Huse has also held the positions of Deputy Inspector General, and Assistant Inspector General for Investigations. Prior to his SSA/OIG appointments, Mr. Huse was a Special Agent in the United States Secret Service for 25 years, rising to the position of Assistant Director. During his Secret Service career, Mr. Huse also served as Special Agent-in-Charge of the Detroit Field Office and held other supervisory assignments in the Office of Inspection, and the Washington Field Office.

Mr. Huse was also assigned as the Liaison Officer to the Department of Justice, and to protective duties at the White House and many presidential election campaigns. In 1995, Mr. Huse received a Special Award from the Secretary of the Treasury for his role as the Secret Service official in charge of the White House Security Review.

Prior to his Secret Service career, Mr. Huse served over 5 years as a commissioned officer in the United States Army with two combat tours in the former Republic of South Vietnam.

Mr. Huse is a native of Medford, Massachusetts and is a 1965 graduate of Boston College in Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts. In August 2002, Mr. Huse and Carolyn Martin Brown were married in Farmington Hills, Michigan.

Throughout his public service career in the federal government and military, Mr. Huse has received numerous awards for meritorious service.