

JONATHAN D. BREUL
Associate Partner
IBM Business Consulting Services
and
Senior Fellow – IBM Endowment for The Business of Government

Jonathan D. Breul is an internationally recognized expert on the policy and practice of improving management and performance in the federal government. Formerly Senior Advisor to the Deputy Director for Management in the Office of Management and Budget in the Executive Office of the President, Mr. Breul was OMB's senior career executive with primary responsibility for government-wide general management policies. He helped develop the President's Management Agenda, played a key role in the establishment and operation of the President's Management Council, and championed efforts to integrate performance information with the budget process. He developed and led the government-wide implementation of the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA), the landmark management reform legislation designed to enable the federal government to manage and budget for results. Previously, he helped Senator John Glenn launch the Chief Financial Officers (CFO) Act. As the U.S. delegate and elected vice chair of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development Public Management Committee, he spearheaded the first-ever OECD standards on ethics and integrity and a major study of the implications of e-government on democracy and governance.

Mr. Breul is a Fellow and Member of the Board of Trustees of the National Academy Public Administration (NAPA) and a Principal of the Council for Excellence in Government. He holds a Master of Public Administration (MPA) from Northeastern University, and a Bachelor of Arts from Colby College. He has received numerous awards including as one of Federal Computer Week's 2002 "Federal 100" winners. In 1998, he received the Elmer Staats Award by the National Capital Area Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration. In 1995 he received the Mydral Award for Public Service from the American Evaluation Association.
