Advancing Government Accountability

Volume VIII, Issue 16

September, 2011

Message from the President

Hello everyone!

Happy fall and I hope summer hasn't been too hot for you.

The CEC meeting for September was held on the 2nd. I hope everyone is aware that we are still looking for an Accountability Outreach Chair and an Early Careers Chair. Surely someone is at least considering if that should be their position. For more information see page 8.

Rick Findley

I visited with the executive officers for the regional AGA's in August by conference call, each of them are preparing to move into full swing just like the Ozarks chapter. Most have planned educational opportunities that any of our group could also take advantage of. If you need certain topics covered please let us know. Our first chance to get started on CPE's will be September 13th at the Health Department conference room. I am sure will see more about it later right here in this newsletter.

We are attempting to put together a citizen's centric report, if you have something to include, or would be willing to help put this together please contact me or any other member of the CEC. We need to have this finished before the end of September.

If anyone is thinking about the CGFM you need to think quickly. You can get a $20 rebate from Sept 1 to Dec 31. See page 3 for details and tell your friends!

Thanks to all the chairs for helping move things forward for the year and looking forward to that cool fall weather.

Men & Younger People More Likely to Engage In Financial Planning

Women are less likely than men to concentrate on financial planning, according to a new survey on financial wellbeing and health.

The survey, by Genworth, found that 54 percent of men focus on financial planning at least once a week, compared to 42 percent of the women surveyed. However, the survey also found that more women than men said that financial wellbeing was important to maintaining a balanced life.

In addition to gender differences, the survey also found differences in financial planning attitudes and the impact on health among people with different ages, incomes and household sizes. Those between the ages of 18 to 24 were more likely (58 percent) to take time to focus on planning for their financial health at least once a week compared to those between the ages of 35 to 44 (39 percent), 45 to 54 (47 percent), 55 to 64 (48 percent) and over 65 (39 percent).

Over 66 percent of the survey respondents ages 18 to 54 said that worries over their personal financial situation have an impact on their health, while less than 52 percent of respondents ages 55 and above agreed.

Financial wellbeing was equally important to all income groups, with more than 60 percent of respondents across income levels below $75,000 identifying financial wellbeing as needed for a balanced life.

Over 70 percent of individuals making over $50,000 said they felt good about their ability to manage the balance of physical and financial stress, while 61 percent or less of individuals below $50,000 in household income agreed.

"We found it interesting that those who said they need financial wellbeing to maintain a balanced life—particularly women—are less likely to spend time focusing on financial planning," said Genworth spokesperson Wendy Boglioli, a 1976 Olympic gold medalist in swimming. "Living well now and in retirement requires a balance between being both financially sound and physically fit. These factors are often overlooked due to busy lifestyles."

Households making less than $25,000 are most likely to feel like they need help but don't know where to get it (21 percent of respondents), while 15 percent or less of all of the other income groups said they felt the same way.

Survey respondents in larger households said that worries over their personal financial situations had an impact on their health. That compared to smaller households, which are more likely to feel good about their ability to manage and balance physical and financial stress. Sixty-six percent of the survey respondents with households that have three or more members said that worries over their personal financial situation had an impact on their health, while less than 58 percent of respondents with one or two household members agreed.

Employer Finds Way to Entice Applicant: Give 'Experience Credit' to CGFM's

It's not unusual for AGA chapter leaders to educate local employers about the value of the CGFM certification in the hope of gaining recognition for employees. What is unusual is the employer making the first move--in this case by offering a stipend to CGFMs to attract a potential job candidate.

That's exactly what happened to Kim Prendergast when she applied for an internal auditor position at the Roosevelt School District in south Phoenix. Prendergast, who is a CGFM, CIA, CPA and CGAP, was offered the job, but she was saddened to discover that it paid less than she was earning in her current position. The district figured out a way to offer her a comparable salary by changing the salary schedule for four positions in the district: internal auditor, director, supervisor and assistant director.

"They came up with it as a way to match the salary, which I thought was fantastic," said Prendergast, who is president-elect of AGA's Phoenix Chapter. "This really came from them, not me."

CGFMs who are hired for those four positions are now eligible for an annual stipend, or "experience credit," of $2,500. The stipend is added to the base salary and spread over each pay period. Prendergast, who accepted the job about a year ago, said it amounts to more than $200 a month. --Christina Camara, AGA

Survey Shows Hiring Plans Rising for Accountants, Other Professionals

Twelve percent of CFOs interviewed for the quarterly Robert Half Professional Employment Report said they planned to hire professional-level accounting and finance staff in the fourth quarter of 2011, while 7% foresaw cutbacks.

CFOs were increasingly optimistic about the hiring outlook, according to the report. The net 5% of financial executives who planned to increase accounting and finance staff in the fourth quarter of 2011 was up four points from the previous quarter's forecast and the highest projected increase in three years. Positions in top demand included financial analysts, business systems analysts, and staff and senior accountants.

Also promising, according to the report: 91% of financial executives expressed at least some confidence in their companies' business prospects for the final three months of the year.

CFOs reported greater challenges finding skilled financial professionals. In the third-quarter report, 41% of CFOs said it was at least somewhat difficult, but the number jumped to 59% in the fourth-quarter survey.

For all industries, 12% of executives interviewed for the report said they were planning to hire professional-level staff in the fourth quarter of 2011, while 5% foresaw cutbacks. The resulting net 7% increase in hiring activity is up four points from the third-quarter forecast. The portion (82%) of hiring executives saying they anticipated no change in staff levels was down from 90% three months ago.

Fourth-quarter hiring projections were higher than the third-quarter forecast in nearly all professional segments.

Other trends in the latest report:

- The legal and marketing fields expected to see the strongest hiring activity, with a net 24% of lawyers and a net 20% of marketing and advertising executives planning to increase staff levels.
- Businesses in the East North Central states (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin) projected the most active hiring, with a net 13% of executives planning to add professional-level staff in the fourth quarter.
- Executives in the finance, insurance and real estate industry expected the most active hiring of professional-level staff, with a net 12% of hiring authorities planning to increase personnel levels.
- Forty-six percent of all executives said they were "very confident" in their organizations' ability to grow in the fourth quarter, and an equal number said they were "somewhat confident."

"Businesses are focusing their full-time hiring efforts on positions that create efficiencies as well as those that support and guide growth," said Max Messmer, chairman and CEO of Robert Half International, in a news release. "Professional-level candidates enjoy an advantage in today's job market, reflected by an unemployment rate for college-educated workers that is roughly one-half that of the general population."

"As opportunities expand for top talent, businesses are taking steps to ensure they are seen as an employer of choice," said Brett Good, a senior district president with Robert Half International, in the news release. "For example, to provide relief from heavy workloads that have built up in recent years, more companies are bringing in temporary and project professionals, as well as making targeted full-time hires."

The Robert Half Professional Employment Report is based on telephone interviews with more than 4,000 C-level executives and other leaders from a variety of fields throughout the U.S., who are asked about their hiring plans and general level of optimism for the upcoming quarter. Survey respondents included more than 1,400 CFOs at companies with 20 or more employees; 1,400 CIOs at companies with 100 or more employees; 500 senior human resources managers at companies with 20 or more employees; 100 lawyers at law firms with more than 20 employees; 100 corporate lawyers at companies with 1,000 or more employees; 125 advertising executives at companies with 20 or more employees; and 375 marketing executives at companies with 100 or more employees, all of whom have hiring authority.

Early Career Chair Wanted!

First off, what does Early Careers even mean? An early career member is a “young professional”; those with 3 years or less of work experience. They receive a discounted membership rate as they get established in their career. There is no doubt that the American workforce is aging and we need to encourage young leaders to step up and lead.

The early career chair position is designed to identify early career member needs and recruit new early career members. This position will help promote the financial scholarships available through the community service chair. Participate in one college campus student fair or job fair to let them know what AGA is about and encourage them to seek the CGFM designation. Provide an “Early Career Corner” newsletter article once per quarter. Encourage early career members to participate in the Chapter.

You don't have to BE an Early Career member to hold this position; you just have to have a heart for those that will follow in the years to come. - Contact Teresa or Brandie for additional information!

★ NEW Accountability Outreach Chair Wanted: National AGA has a new initiative and chapter chair position beginning in the 2011-2012 chapter year. It is the Accountability Outreach Chair (AOC)...the what you ask? This position is responsible for promoting AGA's performance and accountability programs. Accountability is one of four strategic themes adopted by AGA and the AOC is crucial to the successful advancement of accountability in government.

★ Bottom line, what does that mean the AOC would do? First, we need to prepare a Chapter Citizen Centric Report (CCR). The CCR is a 4 page document explaining to the members (and potential non-members) who we are, our goals and challenges, pie charts showing revenue sources and expenditure types and where the chapter is headed. Now, the Ozarks chapter officers are already working on this as a group and should be done by September!!

★ Also, prepare a chapter accountability outreach plan such as contacting government agencies to encourage or help them to create their own CCR. There are LOTS of resources out there, you don't have to reinvent the wheel when it comes to outreach. Encourage a member or become an AGA reviewer of Citizen Centric Reports or the CEAR (Federal) or SEA (State) Efforts and Accomplishments reports.

★ For more information about the AOC, contact Rick Findley, at rickf@co.taney.mo.us.

According to Boston.com and Georgetown University's Center on Education and Workforce the number of Accounting jobs is projected to grow 18% by the year 2018.
