

Program Title	Climate-Related Risk: How the Government Can Lead by Example
Location	Virtual – Zoom Webinar
Date	March 15, 2022
Start Time	12:00 pm
End Time	1:00 pm
Program Description	Climate change is a hot topic in the private sector, but it's not just for the private sector anymore. With the Climate-Related Financial Risk Executive Order signed by the President in May 2021, the Federal government will need to develop a strategy around climate-related financial risks. Learn about the ways the government can develop and implement strategies to mitigate the financial risk of climate change and how the government can report on environmental non-financial information.
Learning Objectives	Participants will learn about the impact of climate change presents financial risk to the government's programs and financial position. We will also discuss emerging trends in developing and implementing strategies around climate-related financial risk and reporting on the data to citizens and stakeholders.
Discussion Topics	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Trends in integrating strategies on how to mitigate the financial risk of climate change in organizations. 2. Measuring and reporting on the impact on climate-related financial risk must be complete, honest, and forthright, and include demonstrable impacts of government programs to citizens and stakeholders. 3. Reporting on environmental metrics can help restore accountability and transparency in government. 4. Trust will increase if governments use credible reports on environmental metrics that are independently audited to promote reliability in the data.
