Welcome

ERM: It’s “All” about the Culture!
Learning objective

- Promote a wider understanding of what is needed to successfully integrate ERM into the management fiber of organizations, so that it adds value and becomes a routine part of day-to-day programs and operations.

Our panel

- Larry Koskinen, JD, Chief Risk Officer, HUD
- Frank Petersen, CGFM, Director, Quality Assurance Division, NASA
- Doug Webster, DBA, CGFM, PMP, CGEIT, Director, Risk Management, U.S. AID
- Mike Wetklow, MPA, CGFM, CPA, Deputy CFO, NSF
- Jeff Steinhoff, CGFM, CPA, CFE, CGMA, Managing Director, KPMG Government Institute (Moderator)
Panelist question 1
In words of Peter Drucker: “Culture eats strategy for breakfast.”
- Why is the risk culture so important?
- What does it really mean to you? Isn’t it just the “soft” stuff that good management advocates talk about?

Panelist question 2
- What are the attributes of a good organizational risk culture?
Panelist question 3

- Can you provide examples where the right risk culture either improved mission outcomes or helped avoid serious problems?
- Or vice versa, where the wrong risk culture resulted in either too little or too much control, negatively impacting mission outcomes or causing other problems, such as wasted resources or breakdowns in citizen service?

Panelist question 4

Okay, I’m sold!

- Now, how do we better understand, influence, and change the risk culture across our agency?
- How do size, organization, and mission impact the equation?
Panelist question 5
OMB Circular A-123: “Successful implementation of this circular requires Agencies to establish and foster an open, transparent culture that encourages people to communicate information about potential risks without fear of retaliation or blame.”

- How do we make this part of the culture so people feel comfortable raising concerns or sharing bad news in organizations that have traditionally discouraged such open communication.

Panel question 6

- In the context of culture, “what” will it take to implement ERM in a manner that provides measurable value to the organization?
- How “long” does it take in leading organizations before they see results?
- And “how” will we know if we’ve been successful, or not?
Panel question 7

- What if the agency head just does not see this as a priority?
- What should people do when they view their organization’s implementation as largely a check-the-box compliance exercise with little value?

Panel question 8

From OMB A-123: “... agency managers, Inspectors General and other auditors should establish a new set of parameters encouraging the free flow of information about agency risk points and corrective measure adoption.”

- How is this being addressed in your agency?
- What advice do you have for breaking down what many perceive as a cultural barrier between government auditors and agency management?
Question 9

- What are your final thoughts on the way forward?
